

False Indigo Bush

Amorpha fruticosa

This shrub is a member of the pea family. With its showy, fragrant flowers, it is also native to much of North America. It can form dense thickets and has a deciduous growing habit, where leaves disappear at the end of the season. In addition to this, it is a larval host to several butterfly species, including the silver-spotted skipper and the gray hairstreak.

- Perennial
- Grows 6-10 feet
- Found on riverbanks, open woods

Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	June	July	Aug	Sept	Oct	Nov	Dec
-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	------	------	-----	------	-----	-----	-----

Flowering Time